can I add product changeset to my Git repository with Ansible? I would like to be able to commit (or push) all of my changes to a Git repository (on a remote server) including changes to the product.yaml file. I am currently using a Git repository as the local version of this file, but would like to change this and commit it to the remote server, and then push it back to the local repository. I am interested in Git, and Ansible for the remote server. A: You can update a `/etc/ansible/hosts` file at your remote server to include the new host and its inventory/all available connections info.

Then, in your local machine, you can execute: Ansible Playbook which contains: # - Update inventory # - Update hosts and hosts_virtual in /etc/ansible/hosts # - Run test playbook ansible-playbook -i inventory
